BROTHER NEARLY DROWNS IN PIONEERS AGAIN SEE EMIGRA- SCHEME OF NAVIGATION IS ATTEMPT AT RESCUE.

The Jordan river, with its treacherous currents and unexpected eddles, claimed into the river while fishing at a point nearly west of Beck's Hot Springs and was drowned. The body was carried under by the curent, and it was necessary to drag the river for over an hour before the body was recovered.

Early yesterday morning Mr. and Mrs. John Steed and their children and Mrs. Clara Steed, mother of the drowned boy, and her young children started from Farmington in a large farm wagon with the intention of spending the holiday on a fishing excursion along the Jordan. They drove to a point just west of Beck's Hot Springs, where the current is very strong.

Springs, where the current is very strong, and the whole party strung along the bank and began to fish. Burton was given a line and rod and was stationed about fifteen feet from his elder brother, Rulon.

About 1 o'clock in the afternoon, in an effort to cast his line far out into the stream, the younger boy slipped from the steep bank and fell into the water. He was immediately caught by the current and carried down stream. Rulon dashed and carried down stream. Rulon dashed into the water in a vain attempt to rescue his brother and was himself nearly drowned.

Before he could reach the younger lad he was swept from his feet into deep water and was rescued with difficulty by Richard Papworth, jr., of No. 2 Ostler court in this city, who jumped into the river and dragged Rulon to the bank. The body of Burton disappeared beneath the surface almost immediately, and it became evident that it had been caught by some spag beneath the water. some snag beneath the water.

After waiting for some time for the body to come to the surface, the men of the party cut a length of barbed wire from a neighboring fence and started to drag the river bottom. After working for an hour and ten minutes the wire caught in the coat sleeve of the drowned child and the body was brought to the surface. The body was then placed in the wagon and the party which started out so happily in the morning returned to Farming-

When it was discovered that the body was caught beneath the surface one of the party walked to the Hot Springs and telephoned to the Salt Lake police de-partment, asking that they assist in find-ing the body. Chief Pitt was unable to accede to the request, as the department has no equipment for dragging the bottom of the river.

E. A. Steed is one of the oldest residents of Farmington, and, having been crippled some time ago, now lives in retirement on his farm near that town. No arrangements have as yet been made for the burial of the child.

The ride up Emigration canyon attracted many others. The cars of the new electric line up the canyon were filled. In the crowd were many young people who had never before had a chance to see the famous canyon and also some old folk to whom the canyon had been a familiar place in the years that are past. There were pioneers who rode up the canyon yes-terday who had, years ago, before the railroads were built, freighted over its rough road. These sightseers knew every turn of the canyon and had a name for every landmark. These names, forgotten since the canyon ceased to be a highway into Salt Lake valley, sounded strange and unfamiliar upon the ears of the young people who listened to the inthe river steamboats.

Mrs. Dixon was crosssing the street with her little daughter, and Judge Powers was turning to go west on Second South after coming south on Main street. The machine was not going fast at the time. Mrs. Dixon's injuries were slight, consisting of a shaking up only. Mrs. Dixon declared that Judge Powers did not sound any warning and later she complained against him at the police station. She said that she would swear out a warrant for his arrest today.

Judge Powers, speaking of the accident, said: "I had gone down Main street to Second South and was turning west. I saw the woman on the street, apparently waiting for a car. I blew the whistle just before I got to the corner. I imagine that the whistle attracted the attention of the child, for I heard the child call to her mother. The lady then turned backwards and the lamp on the left side of the machine struck her and pushed her over. I do not think I was going faster than two miles an hour at the time. I had thrown the power off and was able to stop the auto immediately. If I had been going the statutory limit I couldn't have avoided running over her after striking her. When I found that she wasn't injured I gave her my name and came away." and came away.'

Pacific railroad crosses the upper end of the stream, a steamboat was recently launched. It is used to carry freight and passengers up and down the river from the railroad.

At Green River, Utah, gasoline launches have been used by the ranchmen and others for years. A steamboat which at one time made trips up and down the stream from the point at which the Rio Grande railroad was built has been taken apart and moved to Great Salt lake, where it is now in daily use.

Between the two railroad lines there is long stretch of the river which no ago that with the expenditure of about $100,000 in clearing the stream, Green river could be rid of rocks and other obstacles from Ouray, Utah, to Green River, Utah, and that this work would enable steamboats to ply the river through a fruit orchard region, bearing the products of the fruit growers to the railroad for shipment to the markets east and west. There the family parties also gathered to while away the day without noise or boister. While the children scampered ago that with the expenditure of about $100,000 in clearing the stream, Green river could be rid of rooks and the benefit

As the region bordering Green river is being rapidly settled and thousands of acres of new orchards are being planted, it is believed that it will not be long before active steps are taken to clear the river for steamboats, as water transportation to the railroad shipping point will be more desirable as well as more economical to the fruit growers than the use of wagons.

The gasoline boats now in use at Green River, while large enough to transport a considerable cargo of fruit, and for that reason superior to vehicles for the moving of the fruit from the orchards above and below the Rio Grande railroad, will be inadequate to meet the demands of the region in a few years when the new orchards begin to bear.

Alleged Conspiracy to Manufacture Evidence in the Gould Divorce Suit.

ONE WOMAN ON BOTH SIDES

STARTED OUT FOR WIFE, BUT SWITCHED HER SYMPATHIES.

New York, July 24.-With Frank J. Gould in court, the hearing of the alleged conspiracy to manufacture secret evidence against him was begun this afternoon. He had been subpoenaed by the lawyers for the three prisoners in the case, Mrs. Ben Teal, Miss Julia Fleming and Detective Mousely, and for nearly four hours he sat beside his counsel listening to the remarkable testimony that was given. There were three sensational developments in the case. The first came when Lawyer Carpol, who appears for Miss Julia Fleming, announced that his client had made a confession. The second came when the lawyers for the defense stated that they intend to show that Miss Mabel MacCausland, the milliner's apprentice who accuses the prisoners of having bartered with her to sign an affidavit against Mr. Gould, had gone to Mrs. Ben Teal with a story that she had evidence against Mr. Gould which she wanted to sell to Mrs Gould's lawyers and she thought Mrs. Teal could tell her whom to go to. The other sensation was the announcement that Miss Fleming, who is still a prisoner in the Tombs, is to be married tomorrow.

Mrs. Teal Almost Collapsed.

Mrs. Ben Teal, wife of one of the most prominent theatrical managers in America and the principal figure in the case, was accompanied to court by her husband and two women friends. She was stunningly gowned and seemed to bear up bravely while Miss MacCausland was telling her story of the alleged conspiracy. But by the time the hearing was adjourned for the day sh was on the verge of collapse.

At the opening of the hearing Assistant District Attorney Hart informed Sam Hinn, the Syrian, who was believed the court of Miss Fleming's confession. He said that he had also obtained a hearing as he considers that he has Shipping Interests Will Ask for enough evidence to warrant the holding of the prisoners for trial:

MacCausland Woman's Story. After counsel for the defendants had tried to have their cases dismissed and had failed, Miss MacCausland was put on the stand. She said she had first been called to Mrs. Teal's apartments on a matter of business on July 13, cussed until her next visit on July 16, day to ask the presidents of eastern railwas on this occasion, she claimed, that Mrs. Teal asked her if she needed any money and when she said she did the witness stated that the alleged plot to manufacture evidence against Gould was unfolded to her.

The witness told the same story she told to the district attorney just previous to the arrest of Mrs. Teal, Miss Fleming and Detective Mousely.

Was to Get $600.

The witness swore that she was to get $600 for signing the paper. Then as a climax to the girl's testimony, the prosecutor asked whether all that was in the affidavit was true or false, and she dramatically exclaimed, "False." Upon the cross-examination of the witness the line of defense that will be adopted for Mrs. Teal and Mousely was made known. Lawyer Bluemthal said that he could show that Miss Mac-Causland went to Mrs. Teal with a story that she could aid Mrs. Gould in her divorce suit and asked Mrs. Teal for advice in the matter.

The appeal was for relief from a permanent increase in rates to Texas and called attention to the fact that in August, 1905, the interstate commerce commission declared a similar increase by be contrary to the provisions of the Sher

Ruling of Commission. The increase in question was made it 1903, and it is maintained that the same conditions prevailed with reference to the present proposed increase to Texas points. n the former case the commission ruled that "when the persons who control thes properties (the railroads) can determin in New York what rates shall be advanced and so notify their subordinates in the southwest; when these subordinates can determine upon the amount of such adrances and the time when they shall take ffect; when in addition it is possible to ecure as a condition concomitant corre sponding advances from the Atlantic sca-board, it can hardly be said that competition plays a large part in determining whether that advance is responsible."
